TRIBAL COUNCIL

Chairman's report: May 2013

By Chairman Jimmy R. Newton Jr.
SU INDIAN TRIBAL COUNCIL

Hello and greetings – this is Chairman Jimmy R. Newton Jr., and I am taking this opportunity to report to you, the tribal membership, about recent developments and projects on which the Tribal Council and I have been working.

Since my State of the Tribe report earlier this year, we have been quite busy and I cannot report everything here; however, I would like to provide some highlights and important issues that we are addressing.

First, as I reported in my State of the Tribe address, we continue to work on improving health care options for tribal members. As many of you may have heard at our recent general meeting, we are committed to improving services at the Southern Ute Health Center and to providing tribal members with greater access to help with health care decisions.

We still aim to roll out these new programs in time for the new fiscal year, but the pending implementation of the federal health care law and other issues could make that process much more complex. Regardless, we will continue to strive to provide our members with the best health care available and to provide access to health services that benefits the most tribal members possible in perpetuity.

As with health care, the Tribal Council and I also remain committed to increasing employment opportunities for tribal members. As we reported during the general meeting, this administration has greatly increased the number of tribal-member employees, but we always seek to improve.

Recently, we received a report on the assessment that Tribal Council commissioned regarding our employment practices and, as a result of that report, we are taking additional actions to assist tribal members who are qualified and ready to enter or re-enter the tribal workforce.

One way we hope to do so is to strengthen the bonds

Spring brings return of Bear Dance

Jeremy Wade Shockley/SU Drum

Southern Ute Bear Dancers Shoshone Thompson and Keifer Goodtracks-Alires break off on Monday, May 27 during the final hours the Bear Dance, a Ute springtime celebration spanning four days.

The Bear Dance, the Southern Ute Indian Tribe's traditional celebration of the end of winter and the coming of spring, brought tribal members, friends and visitors by the hundreds to Ignacio May 24-27. Whether it was to kick up dust in the corral, witness the colorful grand entry ceremonies at the Bear Dance Powwow, or join the Southern Ute Veterans Association for the solemn Day of Remembrance, attendees at this year's events were immersed in Ute culture, hearkening back to a simpler time when tradition and honor guided our way of life. For more Bear Dance weekend coverage, see our special edition beginning on page 13.

and connections between our educational programs and our employment needs, so that tribal members can develop skills to fill the tribe's needs. Ultimately, we hope to see a day where each tribal member who wishes to work can find an opportunity of interest to him or her and, hopefully, many of those opportunities will also meet the tribe's needs.

The Tribal Council and I continue to face frustration with the state of the Southern Ute Agency of the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs. We have been working with Superintendent John Waconda to address the staff and budget shortages plaguing his office and to make sure that tribal business and transactions can continue despite these issues.

As a result of sequestration and other cuts, the agency's realty program is staffed only by an administrative assistant – a situation that is unacceptable given the number of transactions generated by the tribe on a regular basis. We are exploring our options for increasing or at least maintaining efficiency in this time of slim federal budgets, and Vice Chairman James M. Olguin has taken the lead in working with Waconda to enhance communication and cooperation between the bureau and the tribe.

Some of these concerns were a topic of Council Lady Pathimi GoodTracks' recent visit to Washington, D.C., as well. She represented the tribe and provided input on President Obama's proposed FY 2014 budget for Indian Country and took the opportunity to raise our concerns about the local BIA agency and its ongoing struggles.

We also had the chance to meet with officials from the White House and Department of Agriculture, who recently visited to take part in events at the new Chimney Rock National Monument with children from our Southern Ute Indian Montessori Academy.

In our meetings with these officials, we again sought assistance to address our concerns, and all participants were quite receptive.

Recently, the Tribal Council participated in an annual retreat, which gave us time to analyze and consider the larger issues we face, such as the tribe's Financial Plan and the concepts that support our current structure. During these discussions, it was quite impressive to compare the state of the tribe when the Financial Plan was considered and adopted to our present situation.

The chairmen and councils that have preceded us have built a strong foundation for us and, during our retreat discussions, we each recognized the important role of this Tribal Council in continuing to uphold that legacy by planning and preparing for the future generations of tribal members.

We returned from the retreat with a long list of "todos," and will be getting to work on these issues even as we handle the day-to-day matters that come before us.

To keep up with the ever changing pace of technology, the Southern Ute Department of Management Information Services has launched a user-friendly website so our membership near and far can keep up with events and departmental information.

The Southern Ute Drum has revamped its website to include sound bites and video. The easy navigation makes for a good read. Now you will not have to wait for the most important tribal news to come out in the print version; you can see it almost immediately on the Drum website at www.sudrum.com.

In the very near future, we will be rolling out a "tribal-member access only" website. This website will be a hub for important tribal-member-only information. You will be able to see the minutes almost immediately and other information pertaining to Tribal Council events and meetings. Be on the lookout for more technology-based communication channels in the future.

Finally, if you have not done so yet, I urge you and your friends and family members to visit the new Seven Rivers Steakhouse at the Sky Ute Casino Resort. I enjoyed a fine meal there during grand opening weekend and can strongly recommend the "chairman's cut." Anyone who visits will be sure to have a good experience and will be supporting our tribal enterprise.

In conclusion, thank you for taking the time to read this brief report of some of the recent highlights and ongoing work that the Tribal Council and I are doing to serve the tribal membership. We hope we can count on your support to help us lead this tribe into the future and ensure a healthy and strong tribe for our children, grandchildren, and beyond.

Thank you.

AGRICULTURE LAND MANAGERS

The Water Quality Program for the Southern Ute Indian Tribe is now accepting applications for the 2013 Cost-share Program. The Cost-share Program is aimed at land managers living within the exterior boundaries of the Southern Ute Indian Reservation on the Animas, Florida and Pine watersheds who are interested in implementing Best Management Practices (BMPs) for more efficient irrigation and/or riparian protection/improvements. The majority of costs are covered by the tribe through conservation agreements in which BMPs such as surface gated pipe, underground pipe and inlet structures, or riparian fencing are implemented. Such BMPs limit return flows from irrigated land and restore/protect critical riparian zones, thus decreasing erosion and other pollutants into our local watersheds. Call project coordinator Pete Nylander at 970-563-0135 for more information.

FREE BISON MEAT AVAILABLE TO TRIBAL MEMBERS

The Southern Ute Indian Tribe's Division of Wildlife Resource Management maintains a small herd of bison for the Tribe's ceremonial, cultural and dietary needs. As a service to the tribal membership, the division makes available bison meat to enrolled Southern Ute tribal members free of charge. Tribal bison are grass-fed at low herd density and are free of artificial hormones and other synthetic chemicals. Bison meat is naturally low in cholesterol and an excellent, healthy alternative to beef. If you are an enrolled Southern Ute tribal member interested in obtaining bison meat for personal use, call the Division of Wildlife at 970-563-0130. Quantities and cuts of meat available may be limited.

U.S. Energy Dept. announces technical assistance for Southern Ute project

Staff report U.S. ENERGY DEPT.

Building on the U.S. Energy Department's technical assistance awards for Alaska Native communities announced last month, the department announced on May 20 that the Southern Ute Indian Tribe will receive technical assistance on a solar photovoltaic project.

The Southern Utes are joined by four other tribes that will receive help through the Strategic Technical Assistance Response Team Program for renewable energy project development and installation. These awards are part of the Energy Department's broader efforts to help tribal communities across the United States enhance their energy security and build a sustainable, clean energy future.

"The Energy Department's START program helps Native American and Alaska Native communities enhance their energy security and create job opportunities in the clean energy economy," said Tracey A. LeBeau, director of Energy Department's Office of Indian Energy. "Building upon the achievements and lessons learned from the program's first round, our new technical assistance awards for clean energy projects will help more tribal communities across the country deploy sustainable energy resources and increase local generation capacity."

Through the START program, Energy Department and National Laboratory experts work directly with tribal communities to evaluate project financial and technical feasibility, provide ongoing training to community members, and help implement a variety of clean energy projects, including energy storage infrastructure, renewable energy deployment and energy efficiency.

The Southern Ute Indian Tribe will receive technical assistance with a community-scale solar photovoltaic project that will power tribal facilities and residences. The tribe has selected single-axis tracking photovoltaics, which have been deployed successfully in similar-sized projects in the Southwest.

The Energy Department will provide assistance with project scoping and help assess transmission and interconnection challenges as well as potential markets for energy sales.

Since its launch in 2012, the START program has helped 11 Native American and Alaska Native communities cut energy waste and deploy local clean, renewable energy projects.

In addition to the Southern Ute Tribe, the following tribes' projects were selected for the 2013 START Renewable Energy Project Development program, subject to final scoping and evaluations with tribal community participants:

- Chugachmiut Regional Corporation (Port Graham, Alaska)
• Ho-Chunk Nation (Black River Falls, Wis.)
• Pinoleville Pomo Nation (Ukiah, Calif.)
• San Carlos Apache Tribe (San Carlos, Ariz.)

KIDNEY CORNER

More causes of chronic kidney disease

By Dr. Mark Saddler
DURANGO NEPHROLOGY
ASSOCIATES

In recent issues of the Kidney Corner, we discussed diabetes and hypertension, the two most common causes of chronic kidney disease. What other conditions can cause kidney disease?

Glomerulonephritis — a long word! — means inflammation of the filtering parts of the kidneys. There are many different types, the most common in the Native American population being IgA nephropathy.

IgA stands for "Immunoglobulin type A." It is a protein that is present in the blood in all normal people. The type of IgA found in patients with IgA nephropathy is abnormal, and this can cause the protein to be deposited in the kidney, causing damage.

This condition can sometimes be relatively harmless. Some people with this condition get blood in their urine intermittently, especially when they have an upper respiratory infection or common cold. Although this can be alarming, it usually does not cause serious consequences.

However, other forms of IgA nephropathy can cause protein in the urine, which can be much more serious and can lead to kidney failure. The more serious forms of IgA nephropathy can be treated with medications that suppress the body's immune system, though most patients with IgA nephropathy do not need this.

Similarly, other types of glomerulonephritis may or may not need specific treatment, depending on their severity. For most cases of glomerulonephritis, the cause is unknown, even though most are treatable.

As one might expect, the earlier it is diagnosed and treated, the better the outcome is likely to be.

Lupus, also called systemic lupus erythematosus, is another common cause of chronic kidney disease. It's more common in women than men.

The cause of lupus is unknown; it can cause disease of many different systems in the body, including the joints, skin, heart and lungs. It is also usually treatable with medications that suppress the immune system, though these medications can have numerous side effects that must be monitored carefully.

Various medications can damage the kidneys, causing chronic kidney disease. The most common may be over-the-counter pain medications such as ibuprofen.

Many people incorrectly think that these medications are harmless, but in fact, if they are taken for long periods of time, they can cause a variety of kidney problems, including kidney failure. Occasional use of these medicines in people who do not have underlying kidney disease usually does not cause problems.

Urine obstruction, for example due to prostate enlargement in men, is another common cause of chronic kidney disease. A physician should therefore usually evaluate problems with urination.

There are also genetic causes of kidney disease, such as polycystic disease. Generally, these are less common in Native American patients.

There are clearly many different causes of kidney disease other than diabetes and hypertension. Early detection of all these disorders allows timely treatment and improves the outlook for all patients with chronic kidney disease, no matter what the cause.

FOSTER CARE/KINSHIP TRAINING, RECRUITMENT & LICENSING

The Southern Ute Social Services Division is seeking Foster Care/Kinship families within the Southern Ute Tribe and other Native American families who are interested providing a home for a youth that is in need of placement. A foster care parent is not a lifetime commitment to a child, but a commitment to be meaningful to a child's life. Be the one to make a difference in a child's life by providing a positive environment and safe place for our Tribal children when they are faced with life challenges. Being a foster family means helping families overcome their challenges and move toward reunification for family. Remember our children are our future generation, if we as foster parents can support children and their families we have made a difference in their lives. Contact Kathryn Jacket, Foster Care Coordinator at 970-563-0209 ext. 2328, Southern Ute Indian Division of Social Services, 116 Capote Drive, Ignacio, Colorado 81137.

PREVENT COLON CANCER

All Native Americans are two times more likely to be diagnosed with late stage Colon rectal cancer than early stage Colon rectal cancer. Finding and removing polyps before they progress to cancer can prevent Colon cancer. The American Cancer Society suggest adults, age 50 or older get one of these tests: A fecal occult blood test (FOBT—a stool test) every year, or Colonoscopy every 10 years. Call the Southern Ute Health Center to discuss what screening test is best for you. Funding programs available: Medicare, Medicaid and most insurance companies pay for colon cancer screening. You may be able to have a free colon test through the Colorado Colorectal Screening Program. Please contact Susan Turner, at the Southern Ute Health Center 970-563-4581 ext. 2363 to see if you qualify! Appointments for Colonoscopy will be at Digestive Health Center in Durango, Colo.

HOST A MAMMOGRAM PARTY

All Tribal and or Native American women are eligible to participate. Medical insurance is required at the time of your appointments. Invite two friends and I will schedule a mammogram appointment at Mercy Hospital for your party - women 50 and above, or if recommended by your provider for an earlier screening. Health Services will provide transportation and lunch - Digs Restaurant in the Three Springs area. Academy students transition Academy students performed the skit "Tüpiichi Uvwevi," or "Stone Soup," an old folk story in which hungry strangers persuade local people of a village to give them food. It is usually told as a lesson in cooperation. Lakota TwoCrow narrated the skit, while students played the characters. The dialogue was in Ute.

Lower Elementary student Dominique Rael received a special recognition certificate for perfect attendance for the entire 2012-13 school year.

The Southern Ute Montessori Indian Academy once again transitioned students into the Ignacio public school system in a ceremony on Thursday, May 23. Four students will transition into Ignacio Junior High School this fall. Other students were given certificates for completion of their respective levels of education. The annual ceremony took place in the SunUte Community Center Gymnasium.

Randy Herrera (left) and Kean Cantsee speak to fellow students Ebony Gomez, Reynalda Martinez, Aveleena Nanaeto, Jawadin Corona and Dustin Sanchez. All played characters in the skit "Tüpiichi Uvwevi," or "Stone Soup," which incorporated the Ute language.

Southern Ute Tribal Chairman Jimmy R. Newton Jr. welcomes relatives and loved ones to the Southern Ute Indian Montessori Academy's Transition Ceremony. Members of the Southern Ute Indian Tribal Council also made welcome remarks.

Primary Two student Jeremy Reynolds will transition into Lower Elementary next year. Ute Language Guide Crystal Ivey assisted Carol Olguin in giving out the certificates.

Lorenzo and Pamela, parents of Saniyya Valdez, infant at the Southern Ute Indian Montessori Academy, accept a certificate from Director Carol Olguin.

Southern Ute Veterans Association members carried the colors, followed by students, to begin the Transition ceremony.

One particularly challenging race involved students handing a balloon covered in shaving cream to each other.

Students could also catch a ride on an oil-barrel train.

A hay-bale obstacle course proved popular, with many students getting creative as they leapt from one mound to the next.

SUIMA students get wet & wild

Following a reschedule due to rain, the Southern Ute Indian Montessori Academy had great sunny weather for annual Field Day on Wednesday, May 15 at the field east of the SunUte Community Center.

Field Day activities included a variety of relay races, which challenged students to get wet while holding onto squishy or slippery objects.

The younger kids enjoyed a bubble-blowing station.

SUPD teaches bike safety

photos Christopher R. Rizzo/SU Drum

Southern Ute Indian Montessori Academy students learned about the importance of bike safety from Southern Ute Police Department representatives Tuesday, April 30 outside the Sky Ute Casino Resort. Community Resource Officer Don Folsom said the program has been sponsored by SUPD for more than 15 years now. The department tries to make the signs as realistic as possible so the kids may learn to watch for them. The younger kids of SUIMA needed that assistance applying their helmets and prepping for their bicycle rides.

Parents and guardians showed up to support their kids.

Older students were riding like pros, though it's never too late to learn about the rules.

Seibel earns SCCC degree, aims for FLC

Staff report
SOUTHWEST COLORADO
COMMUNITY COLLEGE

After getting a solid start on his education at Southwest Colorado Community College, Trae Seibel is on his way to accomplishing his dream.

The 20-year-old earned an associate of arts degree on Sunday, May 12, during SCCC graduation ceremonies at Fort Lewis College in Durango.

"I needed SCCC coming out of high school," Seibel said. "I wasn't that focused. It was good for me. It was tough, but I learned better study habits. It was a good experience. In my case, the two-year college definitely helped me build a foundation."

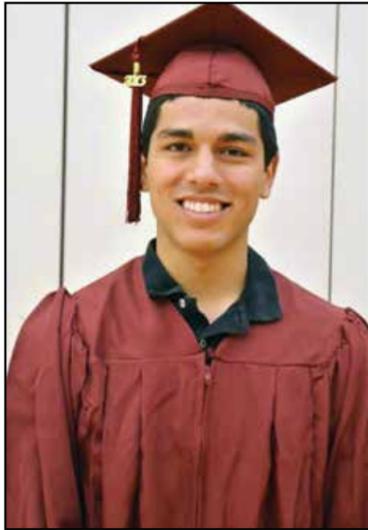

Since 2010, he had been taking classes full time at SCCC, which is a division of Pueblo Community College.

"I had great teachers helping me," he added, noting that he particularly appreciated the assistance of SCCC instructors Gene Orr and Chandler Jackson in history, Claudia Pew in reading, and Sandra Pecor in math.

"Trae was a soft-spoken, hard-working, reliable student in my classes," Pew said. "I wish him health and happiness."

Next, Seibel will move on to Fort Lewis College in pursuit of a degree in business management or secondary education. His dream is to teach in Ignacio, either for the public school district or at the Southern Ute Indian Montessori Academy.

As a Southern Ute tribal member, he wants to give back to the Ignacio community where he grew up. His parents are Melanie and Shane Seibel. His uncle, Matthew Box, is a former tribal chairman of the Southern Utes, and Seibel said he might be interested in serving a leadership role with the tribe some day, too.

Seibel thanked his wife and children for helping him succeed, and said he's looking forward to having some time off this summer to spend with his children. In the fall, he'll start working on his bachelor's degree.

"I think I'm ready now, and I can succeed at Fort Lewis," he said.

Floyd scholarship goes to Ayona Hight

THE SOUTHERN UTE DRUM

Ayona Hight, a Southern Ute tribal member and fourth-grade student at Ignacio Elementary School, was the recipient Friday, May 24 of the 29th annual Elbert J. Floyd Award, a scholarship given to an outstanding tribal-member student.

The presentation took place before the Southern Ute Indian Tribal Council in the Council Chambers. The Floyd family has awarded a scholarship each year since the passing of Elbert J. Floyd in 1985, in honor of his longtime relationship with the tribe. Presenting the award this year were three of Floyd's grandsons: David Floyd, Kenneth Floyd and Donald Floyd.

"Elbert J. and his wife, Frances, both strongly believed in education," Donald Floyd said.

David Floyd echoed the sentiment, adding, "My brothers and I have waited a great many years to present this award."

Emotions ran high as the Floyd family present Hight with the award.

"Congratulations," Chairman Jimmy R. Newton Jr. said. "You should be proud of your achievements."

Ace Stryker/SU Drum

Councilman Aaron V. Torres said he sees future leadership potential in Hight, perhaps one day as a member of the council.

"Education is very important," he said. "It's something that we have to have to gain more knowledge, to become future leaders."

Howard D. Richards, councilman and former chairman, recalled working his first job as a young man cutting grass for Elbert J. Floyd.

"Him and I went back a long ways," he said, adding that it takes a special person to win the scholarship. "Not everybody gets that privilege and honor."

Councilman Alex Cloud

encouraged Hight to remember the role her family plays in her success.

"Always tell your family you love them, because they support you in everything you do," he said.

Award recipients must first be nominated by their teachers for consideration, said Education Department Director La Titia Taylor. The tribe's chairman then reviews all nominees and makes a final selection each year, she said.

"Always remember that you are Nuche," Newton told Hight. "This is a demonstration that Indian and non-Indian worlds can exist together through our children."

Bear Dancers sway in springtime revelry

Since time immemorial, the Ute people have celebrated the time of year when winter gives way to springtime with the Southern Ute Bear Dance, a women's-choice dance that takes place outdoors in the Bear Dance Corral over the course of four days. Following a more recent tradition, students of the Southern Ute Indian Montessori Academy were among the first to kick off the dancing on Friday, May 24. The weekend came to a close Monday, May 27 with a community feast and several hours of evening dancing.

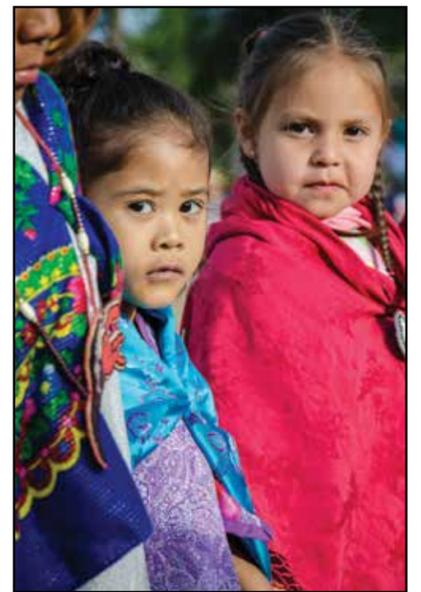

Using wooden growlers laid across the growler box, Southern Ute singers brought familiar songs to the many dancers throughout the four-day celebration.

A set of young Bear Dancers kicked up dust throughout the weekend, drawing applause from the spectators both in and outside of the corral.

Ute Nations Day honors men of service

By Ace Stryker
THE SOUTHERN UTE DRUM

The Southern Ute Indian Tribe honored men from four tribes for service to their respective communities during the annual Ute Nations Day, which took place this year on Friday, May 24 at the Bear Dance Grounds.

Receiving recognition from the Southern Ute Indian Tribe was Bonny Kent, a former Southern Ute Indian Tribal Council member, tribal range rider and game warden. Kent died in 1989. His grandson, Councilman Alex Cloud, accepted the award in his behalf.

"Bonny always put his people first, emphasizing the need to work together and the importance of always remembering where we come from, because that's what makes our people the Nu-chu," the program stated.

The Ute Mountain Ute Tribe honored Henry Jacket Sr., a former councilman and U.S. Army veteran who died in 1985. Jacket designed the Ute Mountain Ute tribal seal in 1975 and was honored at last year's Ute Nations Day for his work.

For the Northern Ute Tribe, the recognition went to Andrew Frank, a Sun Dance chief, medicine man and community leader.

The sole surviving tribal member to be honored was Wainwright Velarde of the Jicarilla Apache Nation. A former Jicarilla Tribal Council member, Velarde has worked against efforts to tax oil taken from reservation lands and helped establish a shrine for Geronimo, an Apache leader. Velarde is currently president of the Jicarilla Apache Culture Committee.

Remembering our warriors

Veterans who served in the U.S. were recognized during the Day of Remembrance ceremonies at the Southern Ute Veterans Memorial Park on Memorial Day, Monday, May 27. The Southern Ute Veterans Association began the ceremonies in the park with guest speakers and presentations, followed by a procession to the Bear Dance Bridge and onto the Ouray Cemetery.

On Friday, May 24, Southern Ute veterans Ronnie Baker and Rod Grove set out to practice a longstanding tradition — one they have upheld since the early 1990s — of decorating the gravesites of Southern Ute veterans with American flags. The flags are left in place through the Memorial Day weekend, showing gratitude for those who served.

Evoking honor while adding a splash of color to the Ouray Memorial Cemetery, the gravesites of Southern Ute veterans are individually marked with crisp American flags each year by Southern Ute Veterans Association members Rod Grove and Ronnie Baker.

LOCAL AFFAIRS

Lions lease gun range to state

Staff report
BAYFIELD LIONS CLUB

As of May 15, the Bayfield Lions Club has completed a transaction with the Colorado Parks & Wildlife to take over management of the Lions' Art Davis Gun Range on a long-term lease arrangement.

The basic details regarding the lease arrangements are as follows: The range will retain the official name as Bayfield Lions Club/Art Davis Range; it will continue to be operated as a free public range for all shooters; the Lions Club is granted approval to recover all brass not retained by range shooters; and the Lions Club is granted approval to conduct special shooting classes at the range.

Donations for those classes will be accepted and retained by the Lions Club. All changes to the range will require a mutual agreement between the CPW and the Lions Club to include any physical facility development, or change of range size or hours of operation.

Future maintenance and supervision over the range will be the responsibility of local DPW employees, including intensive law enforcement to prevent trash dumping, unsafe shooting actions by careless shooters, and enforcement of existing range rules.

All violators of the established range rules will be given a summons by DPW employees for an appearance in our local courts. Although the range will be managed by the CPW, the Bayfield Lions Club still retains ownership of the facilities.

IHS TRACK

Record run leads IHS at State

By Joel Priest
SPECIAL TO THE DRUM

Standing at the podium next to boys' coach Tony Kimball Monday, May 20, at Ignacio High School's year-end athletic banquet, girls' track-and-field coach Kathy Herrera told of a simple target set for Bobcat Track & Field in 2013: "We wanted to take a bus up there."

Noting that the full squad this spring was composed of nearly 40 student-athletes, Herrera not only pointed out that IHS did qualify enough thinclads to necessitate a bus ride up to Jefferson County Stadium just four days before, but also that "we not only represented — we went out and competed."

They made a little school history as well: In leading the Lady Cats to a sole share of 23rd place, senior Michelle Simmons — named the girls' team MVP — clocked 26.37 seconds in her 200-meter dash preliminary heat at the CHSAA State Championships, breaking Jocelyn Swayze's Ignacio record 26.40 set in 1988.

Simmons' 26.44 in the finals was ever-so-slightly slower, but still good enough for fifth in Class 2A.

In addition, the inclusion of the 4x100-meter (DNP; 52.56 in prelims) and the 800-meter medley (DNP; 1:55.80 in prelims) relays marked the first time since 2002 that Ignacio was represented at the State Championships by a baton.

Simmons also tied for seventh in the high jump (5 feet) to account for all the girls' eight team points. Sky Cotton nearly added to the total in the long jump, but settled for 11th with a best of 15-feet-2.5. Chrystianne Valdez was 11th in the pole vault with a 7-foot-2 best, but was still 6 inches out of the points.

For the Bobcat boys, team MVP Klayson Smith and Wyatt Hayes each were multi-event qualifiers in Lakewood, with Smith scoring the squad's best individual result: a split of fourth in the high jump, by clearing 6 feet, 2 inches. Peyton's Chris Epps won at 6-feet-6.

Unable to make it out of the 400-meter prelims with a time of 53.23, Hayes — a co-recipient of the Coach's Award, along with Cotton — managed to take 12th in the long jump (19-feet-0.5), and Smith added a 14th in the pole vault (10 feet). Kelton Richmond was 15th in the discus with a 119-foot, 11-inch throw.

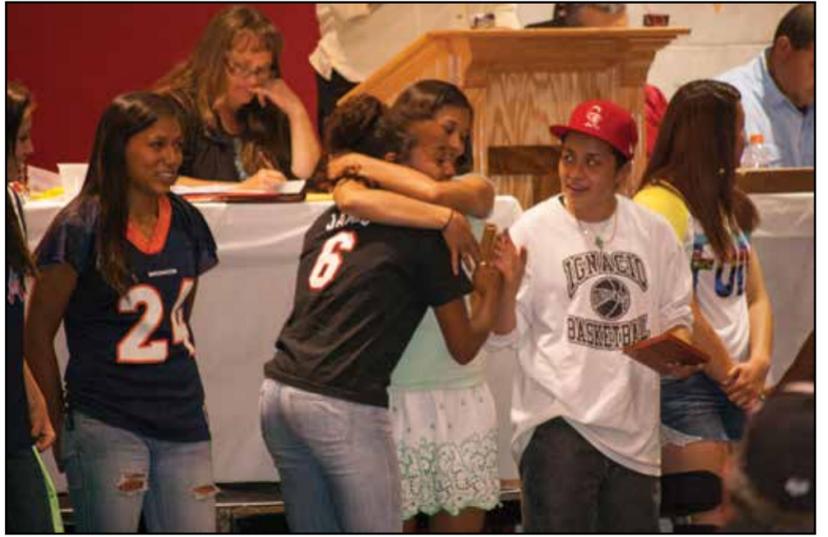

The 4x1 (46.61 seconds) and 4x2 (1:36.80) relays were eliminated in the heats.

EXPRESS YOUR OPINIONS

CODE TALKERS THANKS

During World War II, the Navajo Code Talkers created a unique and unbreakable form of military communication that helped save thousands of lives in a war with Japan.

They did not have an easy life before, during or after the war. Upon returning home, they did not receive a heroes' welcome. Understandably, their secret code was considered a classified military secret. It was not until 1968 their status was declassified.

Almost 60 years later, in 2001, they finally received official recognition with the well-deserved Congressional Medal of Honor.

My first cousin Toni and I got to enjoy a hot air balloon ride at the Balloon Fiesta in Albuquerque, N.M., a number of years ago. It was an awesome experience and one we will never forget.

After the exhilarating ride, we walked over to the midway area looking for the food booths. We had been up since 4 a.m. and had worked up a huge appetite.

Inching our way through the crowded midway, something caught my eye. It was a group of elderly Native men seated at a table, seeming familiar to me. Reflecting between the men and my growling stomach, I suddenly stopped in my tracks — so quickly that my cousin bumped into me and nearly knocked me over. It felt like a true Lucy Ricardo and Ethel Mertz moment!

I turned to intently study the Native men for a moment and told Toni, "Check this out: You see those Navajo gents sitting over there? I'll bet you anything they are the Navajo Code Talkers."

"No way," Toni said. "That was years ago. They'd be close to 80 or 90 by now. Well, maybe — I suppose that is possible."

With just the thought that it could be a possibility, my heart began to race! Toni then said, "Look, if they were the Navajo Code Talkers, you would think there would be a banner over the booth so that people would go over to meet them."

I told her it would be very disrespectful if that were the case, and maybe they don't want the fanfare. I told Toni: "Seriously, check it out. Look how they carry themselves so proudly. Look at their fine jewelry. Check out how they're dressed. Their hats and satin jackets are similar and while there is a logo on the front left side of their jackets, I can't see from here what their hats or jackets say. Let's go over and ask."

As we approached, they were seated at a long table. There were five Native men facing the midway and one seated towards the back of the booth. They all looked very regal, if I can use that word to describe them. Very proud looking is what I initially thought when I first saw them.

They were speaking, quietly laughing and joking to one another in their Native language. I waited for moment, a bit nervous, actually, and said, "Excuse me sir, are you a Navajo Code Talker?"

His face remained expressionless for a long while, as though teasing me, then ever so slowly a smile began to form as he quietly nodded.

I turned to Toni, grabbed her by her shoulders and began shaking her. "They are the Navajo Code Talkers. Oh my gosh!"

After taking a deep breath and then a second to compose myself, I turned back to the elder Native man and extended my hand. He slowly extended his hand, and as I held his hand in both of mine, I looked into his eyes and said "Sir, I want to thank you for your service to our country. I know that it was not an easy time for you."

Tears slowly began streaming down my face, realizing what a special honor this was. "From my heart, I thank you."

I leaned down and kissed his hand. I proceeded to each of the other men honoring them in my way.

Unbeknownst to me, a group of curious onlookers had formed behind Toni and I, so it kind of startled me when I turned around. I turned back to them and quietly asked if I could have a picture taken with them; they nodded their approval.

I was already thinking about giving a picture to my kid brother because he looked up to them. Even as young boy, he truly understood their significance. He looked up to them and admired them.

I wanted a picture as proof to myself that this was for real. I ran around the back area of the booth as my cousin Toni took the picture.

As I moved away from the table and while wiping away my tears, a young white male in his early 20s stepped out of the crowd of onlookers.

He asked me, "Are these Indian men anyone important?"

Due to his youth, I knew it was important that I respond in an informative way.

I said to the young man, "Yes, these men are important. These men sitting here are a part of history, our history, yours and mine. If not for them, you and I might not be here today. These men are the Navajo Code Talkers."

Upon saying that, the camera flashes were blinding. That was our exit.

As we began our way through the midway, I turned around for another glimpse of them and saw that the poor things were being mobbed for autographs and pictures. I got the distinct impression they appeared to be enjoying all the attention.

I was very humbled by that experience and will always keep it close to my heart.

Since that day at the Balloon Fiesta, several Navajo Code Talkers have left us. Just recently, on April 17, Navajo Code Talker Albert Smith "walked." Rest in peace, brother warrior. Aho.

NOTICE FOR PUBLIC REVIEW COMMENT

Preliminary North Carracas Natural Gas Plan of Development Environmental Assessment

On June 1, 2013, the U.S. Department of the Interior Bureau of Land Management (BLM) Tres Rios Field Office and the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) Southern Ute Agency will begin accepting public comments on a Plan of Development Preliminary Environmental Assessment (EA) that addresses proposed natural gas development in the North Carracas area of the Southern Ute Indian Reservation. The North Carracas area is an 18,123-acre parcel located in Archuleta County, Colorado within the exterior boundaries of the Reservation. The area consists of Tribal Trust, Indian-owned fee, U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, and non-Indian owned fee lands. The preliminary EA includes two alternatives for natural gas development in the North Carracas area:

NO ACTION (Alternative A): This would be a continuation of present management related to natural gas development in the North Carracas area. The Plan of Development would not be implemented. Development of fee mineral reserves in adjoining areas could drain Tribal reserves over the long term, resulting in lost Tribal revenue and the permanent loss of the Tribe's resources.

PROPOSED ACTION (Alternative B): This alternative proposes to develop natural gas resources in the North Carracas area of the Reservation in accordance with the proposed North Carracas Plan of Development. The Plan of Development contemplates drilling 48 Fruitland coalbed methane wells located on 18 well pads utilizing horizontal and vertical drilling and completion techniques, one salt-water disposal well, associated roads and pipelines, and a compressor facility. The purpose of the proposed action is to allow extraction, in an efficient and environmentally compatible manner, of the recoverable natural gas reserves known to exist in mineral estates held in trust by the United States for the economic benefit of the Southern Ute Indian Tribe. Additionally, the purpose of the action is to avoid long-term natural gas reserve drainage from wells located and completed on adjoining privately owned lands, which could potentially drain Tribal reserves and result in permanent loss of Tribal resources and associated revenue. The action would meet the goals and objectives of the Tribe as set forth in the Southern Ute Indian Tribe Natural Resource Management Plan—Planning Period 2012 to 2032, as well as the Southern Ute North Carracas Energy Development: Guidance and Protocol to Reduce Wildlife Impacts. The preliminary EA takes into consideration the issues that were identified during the internal scoping process conducted by the BLM and the BIA. Stakeholder agency groups were identified by the BLM and the BIA to ensure that all interested agencies were represented. In October 2011, a letter was sent to these stakeholders to solicit comments and further identify issues related to the proposed Plan of Development. Comments received were considered in the analysis presented in the Preliminary EA. A tribal outreach meeting was held on March 27, 2013 in Ignacio, Colorado to inform tribal members of the proposed Plan of Development. The preliminary EA will be released on June 1, 2013. It will be available online at <http://sugf.com>. Printed copies of the preliminary EA will be available for viewing along with CDs containing the document at:

The San Juan Public Lands Center
15 Burnett Court, Durango, CO 81301

(Monday - Thursday 9 a.m. - 7 p.m., Friday 9 a.m. - 5 p.m., Saturday 9 a.m. - 4 p.m.)
Comments on the preliminary EA will be accepted until June 30, 2013. Your comments are important and will be considered in the final EA process. If you are interested in participating in the process and have concerns, issues, or alternatives that you would like to see addressed, we request that you respond by providing your written comments through the project website or in writing to:

Ewing. It previously belonged to the family of W.A. Redding, which used its cabin as a hunting lodge. Since March 2011, the tribe has been working with the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs to convert the property from fee to trust status, under which the federal government holds the legal title but the beneficial interest remains with the tribe.

Ewing said acquiring the ranch "met the goals and objectives of the Lands Consolidation Program," approved in 2002, which seeks to bring oversight of properties on the reservation under tribal control.

Roughly 800 acres of the property sit outside the exterior boundary of the reservation — meaning that, if successfully converted, it would actually increase the overall size of the reservation.

Making the trip were Chairman Jimmy R. Newton

Jr. and councilmen Howard D. Richards Sr., Alex Cloud and Aaron V. Torres. Joining them were Steve R. Herrera Sr. and Amy Barry of the Executive Office, Ewing, Range Division Head Jason Mietchen, Agriculture Division Head Kevin Mallow and Forestry Division Head Brian Gideon.

The council had requested the trip because the future use of the property is in question. For several years, the tribe has had a custodial and residential use agreement with tribal member Winterfawn Rey, who has cared for it and made a variety of improvements. That agreement expires at the end of this year.

its range units — tracts of reservation land it manages and improves — to tribal members who have applied to graze livestock on them. Overall, the division manages about 124,000 acres, divided this year into 14 available for grazing and five set aside as wildlife habitats. Ten grazing permits have been approved for this summer, said Range Division Head Jason Mietchen.

In a typical year, the units are open until the end of September, giving livestock owners a chance to relocate their animals while they use their own properties to raise and store feed for the winter months.

Angela Abeyta, who has grazed cattle primarily in the Trail and Beef canyons for the past seven years, said the service is a boon.

"I think they do a good job of offering that to us," she said. "Really I've never had any complaints about it."

Abeyta said she plans to range 56 mother-calf pairs and four bulls this year.

While the program is offered as a service to tribal members, the provisions of each year's permits necessarily change with weather conditions, Mietchen said. In dry periods, such as 2013, the division imposes restrictions on the number of livestock allowed and the length of time they may graze.

This year, the range units will close Aug. 1 unless weather conditions improve, Mietchen said. The allowable number of animals has also been cut by 25 percent from last year, he said.

"That's all for resource protection," he said. "The Department of Natural Resources spends a lot of time, a lot of effort and a lot of money managing tribal range land."

Clifton Baker said he has ranged cattle since the early 1980s, when the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs oversaw permitting. The tribe took over in the mid-1990s, Mietchen said.

Baker has ranged his cattle mostly in the Vega and Archuleta Creek areas. This year, he said he's planning to send 60 pair — about half the usual number.

The Southern Ute Drum accepted 22 awards, including eight first-place awards, for its reporting, photography and design in 2012 during the annual Society of Professional Journalists Top of the Rockies awards reception Friday, May 17 in Denver.

The tally represents the best ever for the newspaper, which broke the record it set last year with 13 awards in the same contest. The Drum competed against other newspapers up to 10,000 circulation in Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Wyoming. No other media outlet in its division won more awards — though one, the Colorado Springs Business Journal, matched its haul at 22.
